

Part 3: Model Answer

What can make it difficult to form close relationships in a foreign country?

Interesting question. First and foremost, I'd say the language barrier. Unless two people speak the same language fluently, it's difficult to form a very deep relationship. I'd also say that not having a shared experience growing up can make it difficult to form deep relationships. I don't think this is always the case, but I reckon many people find it easier to connect deeply with others that have had a similar upbringing and childhood. That's just my theory anyway.

Useful vocabulary

Interesting question

When you get asked something you've never considered before.

First and foremost

Most importantly or before anything else.

"First and foremost, I'd say the language barrier."

Language barrier

Difficulty in communication due to speaking different languages.

"First and foremost, I'd say the language barrier."

Form deep relationships

Build strong and meaningful connections with others.

"I'd also say that not having a shared experience growing up can make it difficult to form deep relationships."

I don't think this is always the case

I believe this is not true in every situation.

"I don't think this is always the case, but I reckon many people find it easier to connect deeply with others that have had a similar upbringing and childhood."

Write your answer

What can make it difficult to form close relationships in a foreign country?

IELTS Preparation Courses
englishprotips.com